How to Be Human in the Digital Economy Nicholas Agar,2019-03-12 An argument in favor of finding a place for humans and humanness in the future digital economy In the digital economy accountants baristas and cashiers can be automated out of employment so can surgeons airline pilots and cab drivers Machines will be able to do these jobs more efficiently accurately and inexpensively But Nicholas Agar warns in this provocative book these developments could result in a radically disempowered humanity The digital revolution has brought us new gadgets and new things to do with them The digital revolution also brings the digital economy with machines capable of doing humans jobs Agar explains that developments in artificial intelligence enable computers to take over not just routine tasks but also the kind of mind work that previously relied on human intellect and that this threatens human agency The solution Agar argues is a hybrid social digital economy The key value of the digital economy is efficiency The key value of the social economy is humanness A social economy would be centered on connections between human minds We should reject some digital automation because machines will always be poor substitutes for humans in roles that involve direct contact with other humans A machine can count out pills and pour out coffee but we want our nurses and baristas to have minds like ours In a hybrid social digital economy people do the jobs for which feelings matter and machines take on data intensive work But humans will have to insist on their relevance in a digital age

The Second Digital Turn Mario Carpo, 2017-10-20 The first digital turn in architecture changed our ways of making the second changes our ways of thinking Almost a generation ago the early software for computer aided design and manufacturing CAD CAM spawned a style of smooth and curving lines and surfaces that gave visible form to the first digital age and left an indelible mark on contemporary architecture But today's digitally intelligent architecture no longer looks that way In The Second Digital Turn Mario Carpo explains that this is because the design professions are now coming to terms with a new kind of digital tools they have adopted no longer tools for making but tools for thinking In the early 1990s the design professions were the first to intuit and interpret the new technical logic of the digital age digital mass customization the use of digital tools to mass produce variations at no extra cost has already changed the way we produce and consume almost everything and the same technology applied to commerce at large is now heralding a new society without scale a flat marginal cost society where bigger markets will not make anything cheaper But today the unprecedented power of computation also favors a new kind of science where prediction can be based on sheer information retrieval and form finding by simulation and optimization can replace deduction from mathematical formulas Designers have been toying with machine thinking and machine learning for some time and the apparently unfathomable complexity of the physical shapes they are now creating already expresses a new form of artificial intelligence outside the tradition of modern science and alien to the organic logic of our mind
