who carried a child in her arms turned from a main road of Oldfields into a foot path which led southward across the fields and pastures She seemed sure of her way and kept the path without difficulty though a stranger might easily have lost it here and there where it led among the patches of sweet fern or bayberry bushes or through shadowy tracts of small white pines She stopped sometimes to rest and walked more and more wearily with increasing effort but she kept on her way desperately as if it would not do to arrive much later at the place which she was seeking The child seemed to be asleep it looked too heavy for so slight a woman to carry

Excerpt from A Country Doctor It was night now it was too late in the year for the chirp of any insects the moving air which could hardly be called wind swept over in slow waves and a few dry leaves rustled on an old haw thorn tree which grew beside the hollow where a house had been and a low sound came from the river The whole country side seemed asleep in the darkness but the lonely woman felt no lack of companionship it was well suited to her own mood that the world slept and said nothing to her it seemed as if she were the only creature alive About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
