The Worldwide Crisis In Fisheries Economic Models And Human Behavior:

The Worldwide Crisis in Fisheries Colin Whitcomb Clark, 2006 New management programs are suggested to improve the state of the world's fisheries      The Worldwide Crisis in Fisheries Colin W. Clark, 2006 New management programs are suggested to improve the state of the world's fisheries      The Economics and Management of World Fisheries Trond Bjørndal, Gordon Munro, 2012-10-25 Over the past several decades there has been increasing interest in and concern about the economics of the world's capture fishery resources. Massive amounts of resource rent are being lost because of inadequate management and major rebuilding of fishery resources is called for. This book draws together the latest economic theory of the management of these resources at both the national and the international levels and highlights areas where further research is urgently required. The emphasis is on world capture fisheries rather than fisheries of specific regions and examples are drawn upon from both developed and developing countries. It combines economic theory and empirical testing with an examination and analysis of resource policy options with particular emphasis on fisheries management policies at the international level where some of the most difficult resource management problems are found. The authors maintain that capture fishery resources are properly viewed as a part of society's portfolio of natural capital assets. Consequently a central theme of the book is that managing such resources should be viewed as asset management through time. Written by two leading authorities this accessible textbook has been specially developed to meet the needs of students taking courses on fisheries management as well as professionals working in this area for governments and international organisations.

Beyond the Tragedy in Global Fisheries D. G. Webster, 2015-11-20 An analysis of how responsive governance has shaped the evolution of global fisheries in cyclical patterns of depletion and rebuilding dubbed the management treadmill. The oceans are heavily overfished and the greatest challenges to effective fisheries management are not technical but political and economic. In this book D. G. Webster describes how the political economy of fisheries has evolved and highlights patterns that are linked to sustainable transitions in specific fisheries. Grounded in the concept of responsive governance Webster's interdisciplinary analysis goes beyond the conventional view of the tragedy of the commons. Using her Action Cycle Structural Context framework she maps long running patterns that cycle between depletion and rebuilding in a process that she terms the management treadmill. Webster documents the management treadmill in settings that range from small coastal fishing communities to international fisheries that span entire oceans. She identifies the profit disconnect in which economic incentives are out of sync with sustainable use and the power disconnect in which those who experience the costs of overexploitation are politically marginalized. She examines how these disconnects shaped the economics of expansion and documents how political systems failed to prevent related cycles of serial resource depletion. Webster also traces the increasing use of restrictive management in response to worsening fisheries crises and the emergence of new noncommercial interests that demand greater management but also generate substantial conflict. She finds that the management treadmill is speeding up with population growth and economic development and so concludes that sustainable fisheries can only exist within a sustainable global economic system Water Diplomacy Shafiqul Islam, Lawrence Susskind, 2013 At the heart of these conflicts are complex water networks Working Together Amy Poteete, Marco A. Whale-watching Impacts: Science, Human Dimensions and Management Aldo S. Pacheco, Maritza Sepulveda, Peter Corkeron, 2022-02-02 Saving Global Fisheries J. Samuel Barkin, Elizabeth R. DeSombre, 2013 A proposal for a new global approach for fisheries focused on reducing fishing capacity and providing incentives for long term sustainability The Earth's oceans are overfished despite more than fifty years of cooperation among the world's fishing nations There are too many boats chasing too few fish In Saving Global Fisheries J Samuel Barkin and Elizabeth DeSombre analyze the problem of overfishing and offer a provocative proposal for a global regulatory and policy approach Existing patterns of international fisheries management try to limit the number of fish that can be caught while governments simultaneously subsidize increased fishing capacity focusing on fisheries as an industry to be developed rather than on fish as a resource to be conserved Regionally based international management means that protection in one area simply shifts fishing efforts to other species or regions Barkin and DeSombre argue that global rather than regional regulation is necessary for successful fisheries management and emphasize the need to reduce subsidies They propose an international system of individual transferable quotas that would give holders of permits an interest in the long term health of fish stocks and help create a sustainable level of fishing capacity globally
