and Alternative Medicine, Ministry of Public Health, Thailand

The Kingdom of Thailand has its own system of traditional medicine called "Thai traditional medicine" (TTM). It originated during the Sukhothai period (1238-1377) and developed in parallel with the country as a means of national health care until the early 20th century.<sup>(1)</sup> The spread of modern medicine from the Western world to the East then led to a decline in the practice of traditional medicine in Thailand. As a result, modern medicine eventually replaced TTM and became Thailand's mainstream health-care system while TTM was neglected for over 60 years until the revival of TTM began in the late 1970s.

This paper will cover the principles of TTM and how they can be applied for health promotion, the movement to revive and integrate TTM into the national health system and the lessons learned.

1. What is Thai traditional medicine?

Legal definitions of Thai traditional medicine

According to the "Protection and Promotion of Thai Traditional Medicine Wisdom Act B.E. 2542" (1999), Thai traditional medicine is defined as "the medical processes dealing with the examination, diagnosis, therapy, treatment, or prevention of diseases, or promotion and rehabilitation of the health of humans or animals, midwifery, Thai massage, as well as the preparation, production of Thai traditional medicines and the making of devices and instruments for medical purposes. All of these are based on the knowledge or textbooks that were passed on and developed from generation to generation".<sup>(2)</sup>

Meanwhile, the "Practice of the Arts of Healing Act B.E. 2542" defines Thai traditional medicine as "the practice of the art of healing that is based on Thai traditional knowledge or textbooks that have been passed on and developed from generation to generation, or based on the education from academic institutes that the Professional Committee approved".<sup>(3)</sup>

In other words, TTM is regarded as comprising the traditional philosophies, bodies of knowledge and modes of practice to care for the health of Thai people that are congruent with Thai culture and way of life, and based on the principles of Buddhism. TTM uses various forms of practices to complement each other, i.e., medicine, pharmacy, massage, midwifery and maternal and child health care, Buddhist rites and
