Paul constructs the identity of his audience in his letter to the Romans In particular she analyzes how the notions of autonomy and self agency function for both authors In this dialogue Valerie Nicolet Anderson examines whether Paul can still play a relevant part in contemporary discussions around the notion of identity The approach to Paul presents a narrative reading of Romans and displays an interdisciplinary hermeneutics which brings together New Testament exegesis and post modern philosophy The author constructs a dynamic picture of Paul as engaged in the shaping of the ethos of his communities through various strategies She highlights Paul s actuality reflecting the current use of Paul by continental philosophers and invites more interdisciplinary reflection between exegesis and philosophy

The Self-Donation of God Jack D. Kilcrease,2013-03-20 In The Self Donation of God Jack Kilcrease argues that the speech act of promise is always an act of self donation A person who unilaterally promises to another is bound to take a particular series of actions to fulfill that promise Being that creation is grounded in God s promising speech the divine human relationship is fundamentally one of divine self donation and human receptivity Sin disrupts this relationship and therefore redemption is constituted by a reassertion of divine promise of salvation in the face of the condemnation of the law Gen 3 15 As a new and effective word of grace the promise of a savior begins the process of redemption within which God speaks forth a new narrative of creation In this new narrative God gives himself in an even deeper manner to humanity By donating himself through a promise first to the protological humanity and then to Israel he binds himself to them At the end of this history of self binding God in Christ enters into the condemnation of the law neutralizes it in the cross and brings about a new creation through his omnipotent word of promise actualized in the resurrection

Devising, Dying and Dispute Lloyd Bonfield,2016-04-22 Seventeenth century England was a country obsessed with property rights For only those who owned property were considered to have a vested interest in the maintenance of law order and social harmony As such establishing the ownership of things was a constant concern for all people and nowhere is this more evident than in the cases of disputed wills Based on a wealth of surviving evidence from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury the probate jurisdiction which probated wills of the more wealthy English property owners as well as some of those with a more modest quantity of property this book investigates what litigation over the validity of wills reveals about the interplay between society and law The volume investigates catalogs and systematizes the legal issues that were raised in will disputes in the Canterbury Court in the last half of the seventeenth century However this is not just a book about law and legal practice The records from which it draws plunge us into deeply personal and often tragic situations revealing how the last requests of the dead and dying were often ignored or misinterpreted by family friends and creditors for their own benefit By focusing on property law as reflected in cases of disputed wills the book provides a glimpse at a much fuller spectrum of society than is often the case Even people of relatively modest means were concerned to pass on their possessions and their cases provide a snapshot of the type of objects owned and social relationships revealed by patterns of bequests This too is true for women who despite being denied full participation in many areas of civic life are frequently encountered as key players in court cases over disputed wills What emerges from this study is a picture of a society for which notions of law and private property were increasingly intertwined yet in which courts were less concerned with formality than with ensuring that the intentions of will makers were properly carried out Proceedings of the Society for Psychical Research Society for Psychical Research (London, England),1913
