The Oxford Handbook of Iranian History Touraj Daryaee, 2012-02-16 This Handbook is a current comprehensive single volume history of Iranian civilization. The authors, all leaders in their fields, emphasize the large scale continuities of Iranian history while also describing the important patterns of transformation that have characterized Iran's past. Each of the chapters focuses on a specific epoch of Iranian history and surveys the general political, social, cultural, and economic issues of that era. The ancient period begins with chapters considering the anthropological evidence of the prehistoric era through to the early settled civilizations of the Iranian plateau and continuing to the rise of the ancient Persian empires. The medieval section first considers the Arab Muslim conquest of the seventh century and then moves on to discuss the growing Turkish influence filtering in from Central Asia beginning in the tenth and eleventh centuries. The last third of the book covers Iran in the modern era by considering the rise of the Safavid state and its accompanying policy of centralization, the introduction of Shi'ism, the problems of reform and modernization in the Qajar and Pahlavi periods, and the revolution of 1978-79 and its aftermath. The book is a collaborative exercise among scholars specializing in a variety of sub-fields and across a number of disciplines including history, art history, classics, literature, politics, and linguistics. Here readers can find a reliable and accessible narrative that can serve as an authoritative guide to the field of Iranian studies.

Written Middle Persian Literature under the Sasanids Kevin Van Bladel,2024-09-01 Although there was oral literature among speakers of ancient Iranic languages the author argues that there is no valid reason to assume that Middle Persian speakers alone among sedentary peoples of their time never or seldom wrote literary works in their language Not only are there many Middle Persian literary works surviving in translation and sufficient testimonies to the existence of Middle Persian literary works now lost and to Sasanian Middle Persian literacy there are also strong explanations for their general nonsurvival that eliminate the assumption of a theory of predominant literary orality and disinclination to write literature an argumentum ex silentio We may reasonably assume that it is wrong to propose that what happens to survive in the original language on stone and metal surfaces and in desert environments represents the true range of Sasanian Middle Persianthe odds are far against it Especially when propped up by a concept of ancient Iranians and without any definition of literature or the literary it has no sound basis and is contradicted
