

Who should implement a palliative approach?

- Guideline No 5

A multidisciplinary team that promotes goal setting in collaboration with the family is critical to the success of a palliative approach. This approach decreases discomfort for residents, saves valuable resources and improves satisfaction levels for the family when they recall the care provided.

What is the role of the local specialist palliative care service in an RACF introducing a palliative approach?

Palliative Care Nursing Marianne Matzo, Marianne L. Matzo, Deborah Witt Sherman, 2018-06-28 This 5th edition is an important achievement it is a symbol of commitment to the field of palliative nursing where we have been and where we are going Betty Rolling Ferrell PhD MA FAAN FPCN CHPN From the Foreword The aging population has only grown since the first edition of this comprehensive and seminal publication nearly 20 years ago Based on the need to humanize rather than medicalize the illness experience for patients this text delves into palliative care beyond the specific diseases affecting the patient. Instead, content focuses on the whole person and family. Palliative patients struggle with chronic debilitating and painful conditions and grapple with the fact that life as they knew it has already passed away. Families and friends reciprocally suffer not knowing how to help and therefore become the secondary victims of the disease. This is not the challenge of a lone nurse or a single physician, therapist, or social worker. Rather, palliative and hospice care requires the expertise and unique roles of an interprofessional team to help the patient and family strengthen their resilience, continue to find meaning and purpose in life, and cure what can be cured. Palliative Care Nursing, Fifth Edition, delivers advanced empirical, aesthetic, ethical, and personal knowledge. This new edition brings an increased focus on outcomes, benchmarking progress and goals of care. It expounds upon the importance of the cross-disciplinary collaboration introduced in the previous edition. Every chapter in Sections I, II, and III includes content written by a non-nursing member of the interprofessional team. Based on best evidence and clinical practice guidelines, this text presents comprehensive, targeted interventions responsive to the needs of palliative and hospice patients and family. Each chapter contains compassionate, timely, appropriate, and cost-effective care for diverse populations across the illness trajectory. Key Features: The expanded new edition offers current, comprehensive, one-stop source of highly relevant clinical information on palliative care. Life span approach: age appropriate nursing considerations e.g. geriatric, pediatric, and family. Includes disease-specific and symptom-specific nursing management chapters. Promotes a holistic and interdisciplinary approach to palliative care. Offers important legal, ethical, and cultural considerations related to death and dying. Case Studies with Case Study Conclusion in each clinical chapter. New to The Fifth Edition: An expanded chapter on Palliative Care incorporates most up-to-date scope and standards information on Basic and Advanced HPNA certification, self-reflection, and self-care for nurses. A chapter on Interprofessional Collaboration. Instructor Resources: Power points and Test bank.

Ethics of Finitude Elise Skinner, 2018. Purpose: Within the contemporary socio-political context of palliative care and an aging demography, there is a called-for shift to an upstream provision of palliative care in the form of a palliative approach to care, as well as to frame access to palliative care within a health equity perspective. In the literature, there is a paucity of nurses' experiences in the provision of palliative care within psychiatric settings. Moreover, little is known of the process by which nurses engage in a palliative approach to care for patients experiencing multiple marginalities, including institutionalization, mental health, and advanced age. This research explored how nurses in forensic and geriatric psychiatry engage with aging patients and mortal considerations to discern how ethical dimensions of care aligned within the palliative approach are enacted. An ethical lens by which to apprehend dimensions of human finitude, reflective of central elements of the palliative approach and public health, palliative care was proposed to help to delineate a process of recognition through which values can be identified in the care of patients. The purpose of this thesis was to explore the phenomenon by which nurses engaged with mortality as both an antecedent to adopting a palliative approach and as a phenomenon that captures nurses' continued engagement with patients.

within this approach Objectives There were three objectives to the project 1 explore nurses engagement with mortality within an ethics of finitude 2 identify enablers and barriers and related historical and socio political discourses to engagement of nurses with their patients within an ethics of finitude and 3 articulate and deepen understanding of the palliative approach including ethical dimensions and considerations The research was an analytical elaboration of a qualitative study at the University of Ottawa that examined the palliative approach to nursing care in forensic and geriatric psychiatry at a mental health facility in eastern Ontario Methods Situated within a constructivist epistemic stance the analytical framework elaborated for this analysis drew from both interpretive description ID and interpretive phenomenological analysis IPA Utilizing convenience sampling eight Registered Nurses 7 women and 1 man working in forensic or geriatric psychiatry completed interviews Findings Engagement of nurses within an ethics of finitude was revealed to surface through a process of recognition recognition of mortality recognition of the increased vulnerability of patients and recognition of a corresponding increased responsibility for vulnerable patients and through the affirmation of values including human connection dignity comfort family familiarity and personhood Barriers and enablers to this engagement emerged related to the care environment the psychiatric nurse and patient construction and factors related to family The implications of the related discourses in the articulation of the palliative approach emerged in relation to health system considerations and to the language of the palliative approach Conclusion The process of recognition explored through the proposed ethical lens and revealed in the findings delineated values that underpin the palliative approach by offering an alternate conceptualization to their identification and enactment Insights from this project underscore preliminary insights on a process to identify care practices aligned within the palliative approach as well as possibilities for critical questioning related to interconnected axes of an ethics of finitude in both the care of individual patients and in the enactment of health policy

Palliative Care for Chronic Cancer Patients in the Community Michael Silbermann,2020-10-29 The new global cancer data suggests that the global burden has risen to 18.1 million new cases per year and 9.6 million cancer deaths per year. A number of factors appear to be driving this increase in particular a growing and aging global population and an increase of exposure to cancer risk factors linked to social and economic development. For rapidly growing economies the data suggests a shift from poverty or infection related cancers to those associated with lifestyles more typical in industrialized countries. There is still large geographical diversity in cancer occurrence and variations in the magnitude and profile of the disease between and within world regions. There are specific types of cancer that dominate globally lung, female breast and colorectal cancer and the regional variations in common cancer types signal the extent to which societal economic and lifestyle changes interplay to differentially impact on the profile of this most complex group of diseases. Unfortunately despite advances in cancer care a significant proportion of patients at home experience sub optimal outcomes. Barriers to successful treatment outcomes include but are not limited to access to oncologists in the primary health centers, non adherence, lack of experienced oncology and palliative care nurses in the community, inadequate monitoring and the lack of training of family and pediatric physicians. Telemedicine approaches including telephone triage, education, telemonitoring, teleconsultation and status tracking through mobile applications have shown promise in further improving outcomes in particular for chronic cancer patients following their hospitalization. Lessons can be learned from existing hospices in North America, the United Kingdom, Australia, Centers of Excellence in African Uganda and modern community services in India, Kerala. An important goal of this book is to describe and encourage professionals to develop new community programs in palliative care which include training and empowering physicians and nurses in the community on the principles of palliative care. The Middle East Cancer Consortium (MECC) together with the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) and the American Oncology Nursing Society (ONS) have conducted multiple courses ranging from basic palliative care to more specialized training in palliative care for multiple nationalities in Europe, Asia and Africa. Our experience clearly indicates that to promote such activities one needs strong leadership and confirmed political will to support the endeavor. The new book will emphasize the importance of having a core of multiple stakeholders including community leaders, government, NGOs and media to be actively involved in advocating for the cause and generating public awareness. This text will provide the reader with a comprehensive understanding of the outside of the hospital treatment of cancer patients by medical, paramedical and volunteer personnel. In doing so this text will encourage the creation of new palliative care services improving upon the existing ones and stimulate further research in this field. Part 1 of the text will begin with an overview of the current state of affairs of services provided to cancer patients while being cared for by primary health centers. It will also review the current literature regarding medical and psychological based therapy options in the community for cancer patients at different stages of their disease. Part 2 will address the unique role of the community nurse within the framework of the multidisciplinary team treating the patient in the attempt to provide optimal evaluation and care in very challenging situations such as with terminal patients. Part 3 will provide insightful models of this new discipline and serve as a valuable resource for physicians nurses social workers and others involved in the care of cancer patients The book will take a multidisciplinary approach integrating clinical and environmental data for practical management to enhance the efficacy of treatment while relieving suffering Part 4 will also discuss the application of modern technological approaches to track symptoms quality of life diet mobility duration of sleep and medication use including pain killers in chronic cancer patients in the community Part 5 of the book will also be devoted to modes of developing a collaborative program between governmental and non governmental organization sectors This includes volunteer workers in close collaboration with medical professionals for providing emotional and spiritual support nursing care nutritional support and empowering family caregivers Such a model makes palliative care in the community a people s movement thus transferring part of the responsibility and ownership to the community
