

PUTTING THINGS IN ORDER

First days at school are crucial for both, students and teachers. Sometimes, the first impressions that our students get from us lead them to think of us as 'cool teachers' or 'boring enemies'. Building good rapports with our pupils from the beginning is the first step for a good, long-lasting relationship with them. Therefore, we as teachers should care for the kind of activities we do the first sessions of the academic year and the ambience that is created the first minutes of our stay in the classroom. Besides, pitching the level of our audience is also a very good and sensible thing to do, as this will enable us to adapt and accommodate the curriculum to our pupils' needs and demands.

In this file you will find an entertaining & fun activity to do in the first sessions of the course. Of course, you can give it your personal touch to suit your needs. And remember... having fun while learning is a MUST.

What you need to play it...

- Big and small card with different colors
- Glue / scissors
- A pen

How to play it...

-First step

Split your class into two groups and ask them to name a speaker for each group. Remember to divide students according to their level of competence, so that the resulting groups contain a wide variety of 'abilities'. Once the students have been mixed up, give them an envelope with different and colorful chunks of papers. Each envelope should contain up to 20 different words, belonging to different semantic fields, e.g.: family members, personal information, animals, the city, the house, shapes, colors, the body, the school... you can use many semantic groups as you want as long as, that's up to you.
